Woman The woman is named Nicole Van Camp, 35, of the Kennebec County town of Skowhegan. The woman has not contacted her family since Friday evening when she was last seen in a Skowhegan parking lot.

A passerby reported her missing to state police after she didn't return when she had her car in the parking lot and was supposed to have had her child with her.

Police received a call at 11:30 p.m. Saturday from a man named Daniel "Dan" Wilson, 30, of Thornton saying he had seen her in the parking lot but she had disappeared. Van Camp's car was located about 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Skowhegan. She was found in the trunk of the car and was taken to Maine Medical Center for evaluation. State police said she had been declared missing. State police said Van Camp is described as 5-foot-6 and 100 pounds. She has black hair and brown eyes. She has tattoos on her arms and neck and a scar on her chin. She has a black purse, with a lobster emblem on it, and a red cell phone. The vehicle is a white 2010 Toyota Camry, with Maine license plate No. YFJ086. This was the third or fourth time police have been looking for Van Camp. Police said that, like the previous cases, she may have been involved with drugs and she has a history of mental illness. The woman is not an American citizen, but had been here with her husband for a couple of years.

Lead
Painting Lead is a naturally occurring metal that makes up approximately 2 percent of the Earth's crust. It exists as a crystalline mineral, which is usually found in the form of veins in rocks. The mineral is mined in a variety of ways, including from old mining sites and abandoned sources, from quarries, from painting and plating facilities, and from lead-acid battery manufacturing. Since lead has been widely used for as long as humans have had the capacity to use metal, it is essentially ubiquitous in our surroundings
